

For the trio of 5.7" phablets - Huawei Nexus 6P, LG V10 and Samsung Galaxy Note5 - we asked your unbiased opinion on their camera performance with a blind shootout. We also shared our thoughts of the three flagships. Now it's time to pick the Reader's Favorite. Is it the LG V10 with its excellent camera? The Galaxy Note5 with its screen and battery? Or the Nexus 6P with its premium build and stock Android? Keep in mind the V10 didn't do so hot in the benchmarks and battery tests. And the Note5 camera was behind the LG, its chipset behind the Nexus. The Nexus 6P itself did well all-round, but its screen calibration is off and the camera didn't always deliver. You have until next weekend to make up your mind. By the way, we're working on the next trio of large-screened phones so the choice of best phablet will just get more...
